

Surgical Brain Teaser!

61008A

Across

- This triangle helps identify the cystic artery.
- Which duct contains the spiral valves of Heister?
- If you anticipate well, you will be a _____ with your surgeon.
- If the patient has a lot of adhesions, some surgeons may _____ to do an open procedure.
- Bile passes into the duodenum when the Sphincter of _____ is relaxed.
- The right hepatic _____ supplies the liver with oxygenated blood.
- With this procedure, stones can be extracted from the Common Bile Duct postoperatively.
- You might find _____ stones in the gallbladder with cholecystitis.
- Where is bile produced?
- The opposite of off.
- A cap.
- Additional.
- The Common Hepatic and Splenic arteries are branches off of this trunk.
- A synonym for training (the shortened form).
- Winter covering.
- ___ jelly.
- Ampulla of _____.
- Emergency Room.
- A suffix meaning a process or a resulting condition.
- The entrance and exit point of the liver - _____ hepatis.

Down

- Surgical term for removing the gallbladder (the shortened form).
- Retractors _____ in visualization of the operative site.
- Limited.
- Toward.
- Located in the neck and cystic duct. Prevents bile from being inadvertently drained from the gallbladder.
- Between birthdays.
- Two-handed _____.
- This bile duct goes into the duodenum.
- You have three feet. You are a _____.
- Common Bile Duct Exploration.
- This structure is a landmark that helps identify the cyst artery. The cystic duct _____.
- Veteran's Administration.
- Continuing ____.
- If you talk about surgery at the dinner table, small children will say it's _____!
- EKG _____.
- This is a conduit for bile.
- Don't skip one of these in surgery. A ____.

General surgery and just fun stuff!	1	2	3		4	5		6	7		8		9
	10				11
	12
					13					14
	15		16									17
						18		19	20			21
	22	23						24
		25		26								27	28
								29	30	31
	32					33
								34
		35						36

Question: Who was named George Magazine's "Humanitarian of the Year" 2000?

Answer: Dr. Glenn Geelhoed our new RNFA teaching faculty member and instructor! Dr. Geelhoed's Baltimore SutureStar Workshop in July is already sold out. Call 1-800-922-7747 press '1' for other dates.

Answers found at www.RNFA.org 'Crosswords' under the 'home' tab.

